Orange County businessmen are taking a public stand against domestic violence by partnering with Irvine-based nonprofit organization Human Options for the Men in Motion campaign. The campaign encourages men who are business and community leaders to lend their support and name to the fight against domestic violence.

Human Options recognized FivePoint Holdings Chief Communications Officer Steve Churm and leader of the Men in Motion campaign, alongside the other 30 men who participated in this year's campaign, during a reception hosted by Human Options board member Mike Morris at the offices of Minyard Morris in Newport Beach on Feb. 28.

Men in Motion has helped raise more than $500,000. The funds support education and prevention programs for OC teens, empowering them to become role models on their campuses and changing the culture of dating violence.
