Nonprofit honors businessmen's efforts against domestic violence

Human Options, an Irvine-based nonprofit, held a reception this week in Newport Beach to honor Orange County businessmen who have participated in a campaign to combat domestic violence.

Tuesday's event in the offices of the law firm Minyard Morris recognized Steve Churm, chief communications officer of FivePoint Holdings and leader of the Men in Motion campaign, which encourages men who are community or business leaders to support the fight against domestic violence.

"We are so impressed with how engaging and powerful Steve Churm is about the issue of domestic violence," Maricela Rios-Faust, chief executive of Human Options, said in a statement. "A leader like Steve shows that young boys can reach their full potential while admiring and supporting women in a powerful way."
